

ACTIVITIES FOR NON-RECREATION OR NON-EDUCATION PURPOSES

Some examples of activities that are neither considered as “recreation purpose” nor “education purpose” include:

- (a) A company providing aerial surveying or outdoor photography services for a public educational institute.
- (b) A company conducting an outdoor flight demonstration with its UA to its prospective customers.
- (c) An organiser conducting competitive UA races, flying displays or using UA as part of a ticketed show staged in the Singapore Indoor Stadium.
- (d) A company (the business being agriculture) using its UA outdoors to survey crops or spray pesticides.
- (e) A government agency (excluding the Singapore Armed Forces) using its UA to perform aerial surveillance, aerial fire-fighting or as part of the provision of emergency or essential services.
- (f) A company, such as a factory, using its UA outdoors to deliver small articles between various locations in its compound.
- (g) An outdoor performance involving UA at Chingay Parade or National Day Parade.
- (h) A company using its UA to carry out inspections of its facilities or properties indoors. For example, tunnel inspections, sewage inspections or internal fuel tank inspections.
- (i) A warehouse using its UA to stocktake its inventory indoors.
- (j) A training service provider conducting UA flying courses for an educational institute’s students on its behalf.
- (k) A public educational institute using its UA to take photographs and videos of its activities and events.
- (l) A company’s public communications department using a UA to take event photographs for marketing or publicity efforts.
- (m) A volunteer using a UA to take photographs and videos for a charity event.
- (n) An individual sharing his personal collection of aerial photographs taken using his UA with business for marketing purposes, regardless of whether there are any monetary exchanges.