

INDIGO LAUNCHES FLIGHTS BETWEEN SINGAPORE AND DELHI

As part of the Indian low-cost carrier (LCC) IndiGo's strategy to expand its operations to Singapore and tap into the fast-growing Singapore-India market, the airline recently launched flights between Singapore and Delhi in September and is planning to open up many more routes.

IndiGo began serving Changi Airport with Mumbai-Singapore services from 10 October, while Chennai and Kolkata services are expected to commence within the next few months. This will be followed by additional daily flights on the Delhi and Mumbai routes early next year. Flights to Singapore from Bangalore and Hyderabad are also being considered.

According to Aditya Ghosh, President of IndiGo, the airline sees great potential in the Singapore market due to the region's growing airline markets, as well as the strong ethnic and economic ties between Singapore and India.
